Population according to the 2008 statistical definition of population, detailed data, Slovenia, 30 June 2008

Wednesday, July 15, 2009, E-Release

Detailed data on the population by different age groups and sex are published in the SI-STAT database. The data series is completed with data as of 30 June 2008.

The SI-STAT database contains the series of data on total population of Slovenia and population groups. The data series is completed with data as of 30 June 2008 according to the 2008 statistical definition of population.

In most of the tables the data are published for two dates; as of 30 June and 31 December. This time we are publishing population data according to the new statistical definition of population.

Data on the population by individual groups and by age groups are available for municipalities, statistical regions and Slovenia as a whole. All data are published by sex.

The data are the result of the statistical survey on population, which is carried out by the Statistical Office of the Republic of Slovenia. The main source of data is the Central Population Register, which is kept by the Ministry of the Interior.

Methodological note

For data from 31 December 2008 on the Statistical Office of the Republic of Slovenia is using a new statistical definition of population. This represents a break in the data series, meaning that the data as per the new definition are not directly comparable to the data as per the old definition. A more detailed description of both methodologies is available in methodological explanations.
